I received a telephone call from Corrine Brody on May 19, 2004 and she indicated she was invited to attend a conference and the Sterling Group wanted to pay her registration fee. The Sterling Group currently does no business with the County, however, Ms. Brody stated in the past the County brought a company in as consultants to help advise the County the steps to take to improve managerial performance.

I advised Ms. Brody that the recently-enacted ordinance change that prohibits county vendors or potential vendors from paying for county officials or employees to travel did not apply to the Sterling Group at the present time. Therefore, there is no conflict of interest if she allows Sterling to pay for her conference registration.
