Mr. Chicola:

The county's Conflict of Interest and Code of Ethics Ordinance prohibits county vendors from paying travel or travel-related expenses for county employees. Based on this rule, IBM's waiver of the conference registration fee and providing you with a travel stipend would amount to a violation of the abovementioned section of the ethics code. If the County pays for you to attend this conference or the County Commission grants you a waiver, you would be in compliance with this ethics provision.

If you have any further questions, please do not hesitate to contact me at your convenience.

Sincerely,

Robert Meyers, Executive Director

Mr. Meyers, I am the division director at ETSD over data center services. I am requesting your feedback and recommendation regarding our ability to accept an invitation by IBM Corp., to attend a conference in Orlando later this year where we would be making a presentation on our experiences in the County using various software products provided by IBM Corp. In return for our participation, IBM will be waiving the conference entry fee of $1,900, plus will be providing a travel stipend of $1,800.

Background:

Every year, IBM Corporation organizes a technical user conference where they demonstrate many of the high-tech features of their enterprise network management software products. This conference is invaluable because these software demonstrations are not only held by IBM but also by other companies who are using these products in their day-to-day network management operations. The attendees are able to observe how the IBM software is being utilized in mission-critical situations by some of the leading-edge companies worldwide.

Miami-Dade County has successfully deployed a subset of IBM's collection of integrated tools to efficiently troubleshoot and proactively manage the County's enterprise network and systems resources and ensure available, reliable, and secure operation of the County's total information technology environment so that County employees and citizens can communicate rapidly and securely. Therefore, IBM has asked the County to participate in this conference to demonstrate how we are using the IBM toolset in our day-to-day mission-critical network management operation.

Please advise, thank you.
