On 3/29/05 spoke with Mark Ripley, DPM. he asked whether a company's corporate counsel and its sales director need to register as lobbyists in order to meet with DPM staff concerning a upcoming contract. I discusses with Mike M. and Robert M. and subsequently advised Mark that only the sales associate needs to register, since lobbying activity falls within the scope of his employment. The corp. counsel does not have to under the Code given that a corp. counsel's role is not one that normally includes lobbying.
