Subject: RE: Question

Robert,

If it is purely a volunteer position and the employee does not keep any of the $6,000 – she is merely reimbursed for the travel expenses she has incurred not to exceed $6,000, then it would not be considered outside employment and she would not have to file the form. If she were permitted to retain a portion of the $6,000 (assuming she did not have travel expenses for a particular year of at least $6,000), then she has income and it needs to be reported.

Please let me know if this answers her question.

Thanks,

Robert

Mr. Thompson -

You made a presentation at our May 10th Executive Staff meeting. I am the Chair of the Audit Committee of Tropical Financial Credit Union. While it is a volunteer position, I receive an annual $6,000 travel allowance to attend continuing education courses/conferences. Should I be completing an "Outside Employee" form for this volunteer position?

Thanks again for taking the time to educate us on our responsibilities as public servants and in advance for addressing my question.
